WHITE PERFORATED TEXT MIRROR

Text Textile Collection

Product Description

White Perforated Text Mirror is a laminated textile and mirror glass in which typography is formed directly within the textile membrane. A dense white textile is chemically burned out so that the letterforms themselves become openings in the fabric, allowing light and views to pass through the surface. During the process, small textile residues from the removed fibers remain partially attached and are preserved within the laminate, revealing the physical transformation of the material. On the front glass surface, the same text appears as a mirrored outline precisely aligned with the perforated textile layer. This layered composition creates a dialogue between absence and reflection. The perforated text introduces transparency, while the mirrored outline adds reflective depth. White Perforated Text Mirror transforms typography into an architectural surface where language functions as structure, filter, and spatial element.
